Abstract

"You're hired!" Now what? Once the exhilaration settles and your first day approaches, you begin to look at your future employer differently. Before, recognition is the goal. You want your foot in the door. You want to beat your competition. Now, you are about to be part of a team. Interoffice politics, best practices, strategic plans, getting up to speed, and just generally recognizing your place in the team become your focus.

This seminar explores those areas and my experiences with them. It looks at the various struggles you can face. It highlights critical gotchas and ways to fit in quickly. The topic points out opportunities to look for. It canvases areas where you can usually relax - like getting up to speed. Learning from my varied experiences can help prepare you. A bit of comfort awaits. "You're hired!" And here's what to expect.
